PERSONALITY ANALYSIS

Personal style

| Personal style: Coordinator

Dylan Aumis is a natural leader with a conscientious approach — two complementary qualities which enable him to set the agenda for projects and successfully complete them. He analyzes things based on facts, paying special attention to the reliability of his decisions and his work. He is very strict when it comes to following procedures and is quick to remind coworkers to follow suit. He does his utmost to achieve the goals he sets for himself, even at the risk of undermining his relationships.

| Main strengths

Relationship management

- He makes decisions with complete independence, advancing his work on his own.
- He is a critical thinker and only accepts reasoned ideas.
- He tries to get his ideas across and inspires team spirit.

Work management

| The activities he prefers

Evaluate

Evaluating is an activity through which Dylan Aumis can feel personally fulfilled. He particularly likes being a point of reference and contributing his opinions on his field of expertise. He has very specific ideas on how projects should be carried out, and does not hesitate to challenge the opinions of others.

Design

Whenever Dylan Aumis is interested in creating new things, it is in the context of a clear framework and a specific objective. He sometimes appreciates having a certain freedom in his work, and being able to suggest new ideas, but it remains a secondary source of motivation for him.

Organize

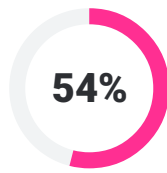

Organizing is not an activity that Dylan Aumis considers a priority. He still strives, however, to ensure there is a minimum amount of structure and standards to the work that he carries out. All in all, it is something that he enjoys doing as long as it remains a secondary aspect of the job.

MOTIVATION ANALYSIS

His management style

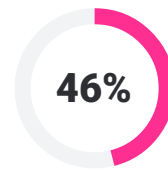

| What this means

Dylan Aumis is a manager whose foremost concern is the team's well-being. He strives to listen to others and take their individual limitations into account. He is an inspiration for employees who prefer a manager that acknowledges human aspects instead of focusing solely on results. He is motivated by teamwork and by fostering a collective spirit.

| The management style he seeks

Dylan Aumis expects a manager to be concerned foremost with the team's well-being. He needs a manager who will listen to him with compassion, and who takes individual limitations into account. The leader who inspires him and whom he trusts is one who acknowledges human aspects instead of focusing solely on results. He is motivated by teamwork and collective development.

MOTIVATION ANALYSIS

The culture in which he thrives

His ideal culture

Dylan Aumis prefers highly stable cultures where everyone has a clear scope. He needs to work in structured contexts that set clear standards and rules for everyone alike. These conditions are necessary for him to commit in the long term. He is best suited for environments where each person has a defined role, and the autonomy to coordinate with others as necessary. He appreciates cultures where the sense of duty is valued highly, but which also welcome initiatives to improve work methodologies. In this sense, he can enjoy an environment that is open to change.

APTITUDE ASSESSMENT

His way of thinking

| Decision-making: Prudent

Tendency to take the time to make the most of available resources.

| Preferred tasks: Advanced

Capacity to comprehend new and strategic subjects.

| Learning style: Innovative

Ability to easily assimilate new concepts through analysis.

| How he learns new skills and concepts

Brilliant from an intellectual point of view, Dylan Aumis tends to easily assimilate foreign concepts. He is able to understand new or complex subjects without needing to put them into practice. This means he can develop his skills by researching and reading on diverse subjects. He needs to be intellectually stimulated by his work, and might get easily bored otherwise.

Dylan Aumis's spontaneous nature leads him to learn by testing out concepts and techniques himself. He finds that the best way to acquire new knowledge is to first try, develop his understanding through failure, and then try again. He can sometimes lack patience. To assimilate new ideas or new knowledge, he first needs to experiment by himself.
